

Yale School of Drama is the nation's only graduate conservatory program that trains leaders in every theatrical discipline, offering the Master of Fine Arts (MFA) degree in Acting, Design (sets, costumes, lighting, and projection), Sound Design, Directing, Dramaturgy and Dramatic Criticism, Playwriting, Stage Management, Technical Design and Production, and Theater Management. The School of Drama offers certificate programs in most areas of study for those students who have not received an undergraduate degree, as well as a Doctor of Fine Arts in Dramaturgy and Dramatic Criticism.

Surveys indicate that 78% of recent School of Drama alumni, i.e., those within 10 years of graduation, earn their living in the discipline in which they were trained or in a related field. It is important to note that conventional employment data do not convey a complete picture of the professional lives of our alumni, since the nature of the theatre industry is that a significant proportion of individual artists work on a freelance basis. Of the recent alumni working in theatre or related fields, approximately two-thirds are employed full-time and one-third are engaged in part-time or freelance work. The most common fields in which graduates are employed are, in order of frequency: theatre, teaching, television/film, and other live performing arts.
